

reflection on reading/practice: chapter 11

Reflection helps us digest what we have been experiencing and makes it more useful. Please complete this form while and after you have read the eleventh chapter (pages 209 to 235) and followed the various practices (personal choice of two meditations & the breathing space) of Mark Williams & Danny Penman's book "Mindfulness: a practical guide to finding peace in a frantic world". If you want to, alter questions or simply write on the back of this sheet.

☆ which bits of what you've experienced & read do you feel are most relevant and important for you personally? in what ways do you think they are particularly relevant and important?

☆ are there aspects of what you've experienced & read that you disagree with, have doubts about, or find unclear? what aspects?

☆ remembering what you have just written (and other discussions about these topics), what do you feel it would be most helpful for you to focus on, or remind yourself, or do to make your mindfulness practice even more helpful for you now and in the coming week?
